Abstract	Local government has important roles in developing populist economic. The existence of Banyumas Regional Regulation No. 3/2010 about the Management and Supervising of Traditional Markets, Shopping Centres and Modern Stores is a local government's way to preserve the existence of traditional markets. However, modern markets are growing dramatically; therefore it creates imbalance competition with traditional markets. There are many modern market establishment regulations violated not only by the entrepreneurs but also the street level bureaucracy who gives permits to modern market establishment. It indicates the local government's lack of control in modern markets. This article aims at explaining the failure in controlling and supervising modern markets. In social justice perspective, controlling and supervising modern markets effectively can be achieved by creating suitable regulations and at the same time protecting the traditional markets.
