Abstract	Many packaged foods in Indonesia do not have halal product assurance. Therefore, it is important for the Muslim population in Indonesia to have knowledge of halal labeling so that they can carefully distinguish food that is safe to buy. People who have health awareness will prefer to buy halal packaged food because it has health guarantees. This study aims to determine the relationship between halal labeling knowledge and health awareness with the decision to purchase halal packaged food. The research method used analytic observations with a cross-sectional design. The population were all students of Pondok Pesantren Al-quran Al-amin Pabuwaran, Purwokerto, Central Java. The sample was selected using purposive sampling technique. Data was collected using a questionnaire which was analyzed using the chi-square test. Descriptive data is presented in the form of a frequency distribution table. The results showed that students' halal labeling knowledge was not related to students' halal packaged food purchasing decisions, and students' health awareness was related to students' halal packaged food purchasing decisions. ABSTRAK Banyak makanan kemasan di Indonesia yang belum memiliki jaminan produk halal.
